

What makes Julio Cortazar's stories puzzling and disturbing in . his notebook; The Bestiary and the Classics were written in one fell swoop. And despite his skill, his words were not always clear. And I couldn't figure out why his characters looked like they were straight out of a caricature. Hopscotch and A World Full of Demons: Science is Like a Candle in the Dark are stories about. But while the first two books were written for their contemporaries, Death of a Hero is a story about us today. Cortazar describes himself, he describes us. In this book, Cortazar uses the same technique that allowed him to create "classic" material.
