Microsoft Visio Standard is a diagramming, presentation and collaboration tool. It is a professional and easy-to-use alternative to Visio Professional, the most popular diagramming tool on the market. Like the Standard version, Visio Professional offers the full set of business diagramming tools and formatting options. It also provides advanced features to create highly technical diagrams, such as circuit and process charts, CAD designs, and flowcharts. Microsoft

Visio Standard is offered in a variety of editions, depending on the price, the number of user licenses and whether there are any software applications preinstalled.

Q: nhibernate not returning updated objects I have a scenario in nhibernate where I'm updating a Item entity from my session. But, if it finds any id's that does not exist, it creates new entities. I've got a requirement where I can only use the Item name to look up the Item, since the Item is a navigation property on a collection of an entity A. That works fine. However, if I update the Item and its row no longer exists, I get a new row that was created instead of returning the old one. The code is below: An example entity is below

public class Item
{
    public virtual int ItemId { get; set; } public virtual string ItemName { get; set; } public virtual int

LocationId { get; set; } public virtual Location
Location { get; set; } public virtual IList Products { get; set; } } My session is mapped to the collection
property "Products" I tried to override HqlGenerator to look for the "Id" of the item that I'm updating. If I can find the Id that I'm updating, I compare it to the ones that were in the session when the session was mapped in. If they are not the same,
I try to go back to the db to get the old objects. If I go to the db, I cannot then find the item that I previously had in the session. I think this is because the Id of the item is changed on creation. I also tried to use Session.Get(id), but it also does not return the old row. public override
NHibernate.Hql.Ast.HqlGenerator
GetHqlGenerator() {
