Illustrator Adobe Illustrator is an image editing program that can create vector illustrations and design icons, as well as use some of the same features of Photoshop's layer-based system. The program is easy to use and free of adware. Illustrator is primarily for design and layout work as well as for the creation of icon, emblem, and other small-format images. You can also create clip art for use in videos or in print media. Illustrator is sometimes criticized as being monotonous, but this is not the case. The program is very user friendly and easy to learn. You can produce sophisticated designs in a short amount of time, unlike Photoshop, which is a bit daunting for beginners.

After the 2008 Canadian federal election, I was deeply disappointed to see so many Canadians get involved in the stealing of the election. I researched and found out that a new (and silent) type of voter fraud was being used, namely they were using a type of voter identification card (ACORN registered voter cards) and voting in more than one riding (no where else). Seeing that the Conservative party was leading all other parties at the time, I believed this was a conspiracy by the Conservative party to win the election. The main reason I believed they were doing this is because when the Canadian people were polled after voting, they showed overwhelming support for the Liberal party and I don't remember any poll showing that the Conservative party was actually leading. Yes, the Liberal party was looking at me like I was crazy, but that's another story. Flash forward 4 years and the Conservative party was leading in the polling again, only this time they were incredibly unpopular with the majority of the voting public. I don't know how you can call yourself the Conservative party if your leading in polls and then when you go to the polls you end up losing?. So, now, the Liberals party was doing everything it could to talk about the Conservative party and how they were taking advantage of the people. I believed they were going all-out in trying to get these people to vote for the Liberal party. I also thought that the Liberal party
