What's new in Hi-Score Boi:

Detective Ellen Allen fights like a robot. It's all the other things she's done. It's all the other parts of her that made humanity fall in love with her in the first place. What are the odds of someone she's never met wearing the same glasses she has? The same clothes? And what if they're not the same person? Ellen doesn't know because she didn't have time to look. She is in her latest crisis without a plan. The entire city of Detroit seems to be turning over. A new cyboid is lost with a powerful alien weapon and powerful allies are either lost or worse. Ellen goes from a furious runner-up to a bloody fugitive and the only thing she seems to know how to do is run. But it's too late to be a good detective who's got her best friend in trouble. It's too late to escape the things she has no control over or the things that she doesn't even dare to think about. There's a new player in town. A player that Ellen can't afford to ignore. A player that has no intention of backing off. A player that's making the cities streets restless. And when things heat up between Ellen and the new arrival, it is the last thing Ellen is expecting. There's nothing under her Cristina Mercado is used to the pain of missing other people. Her mother has not been the same for as long as she can remember and the memories of her father are foggy, more like dreams, but Cristina knows that even without the images her mother occasionally has, the nightmares that plague them, the tears her husband cries, she would know the yearning he feels for her. She believes he has always felt that way and that their struggles are more than just simple family issues. She knows that Niles has not only a fear of being alone, he fears that he will end up a schizophrenic like his mother before her death. It is this love that somehow brought her back here, to this city, this time. New York has fallen. Long gone are the days when she has food for her family, just a quick run and a restless drink. Now the streets are populated by animals, by supersoldiers, by junkies, homeless. Bastion, the city Niles belongs to, is a place of power, but it is tainted by the excesses of a war between science and an underground organization of criminals and scientists. New York is

This is a step by step and quite easy for those who have the patience to try it. Trimming the old purse. Trimming the old purse. We have a couple of purses that are getting a bit worn at the corners and seams so I decided to use some of the fabric to trim them and give them a new look. I used some black and white fabrics that I had in my stash but you can use whatever fabric you have. I cut the purse fabrics to 3 1/2 x 5 1/4 inches. This is my first piece so I am still making the pocket lining. I made my purse up the same way I did my bag and used the same template because the purse is just a smaller version of my bag. I did tweak it up a bit but it was pretty straightforward. I had some white fabric that I trimmed to 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches that I started by sewing together all three fabrics. Then I cut off 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches at one end. I put the other end right against the back fabric and
