This game is fucking awesome. The battle system is unique and pretty intuitive, the stories are detailed, and you can customize pretty much anything in your character. The weapon designs are fun and the art is top notch. I found it quite difficult at first because there's so many different enemy types and very few enemies of the same type and a lot of enemies who can be attacked at once, but it was well worth the extra planning and trial-and-error. The combat is described as melee but isn't as limited as I originally thought, and you can dual-wield weapons simultaneously. The graphics and music are also great. It was a bit odd at first, trying to get used to the turn-based battle system, but I enjoyed it eventually. The ending anime was enjoyable. I recommend this game to anyone who likes RPGs. The RPG Maker RTF Editor lets you easily create and edit your own RPG Maker software.

Welcome to RPG Maker Online. This site is dedicated to the creation of maps and maps for the RPG Maker VX software.

To use this site, just click on any of the links on the left-hand side of the page. You can use either the Japanese or English version of the website depending on which you prefer to use.

The following guides are in order of complexity from simple to most complex:

The process of getting a game that's been released on a disc to work natively in older versions of Linux is not a simple one. If you don't mind dualbooting with Windows it's fine, but we show you how to get xbmc working on linux on a single machine. You will need to install the XBMC Installer. The first thing you will do is add this repo for the XBMC Installer, and install it if it is not already installed.

The Persona music collection comes in a huge collection of approximately 1,200 different songs. The collection includes songs from recent games as well as the older games. The demo is in Japanese, but we can get this to work with subs for the most part.

This is a quick example of using the Persona music collection in xbmcubuntu. We are just going to load up a song in a media player, go into the XBMC Settings, and press the Add Collection button. The first prompt will require you to enter a repository on the web. We will use Persona since its something we have collected ourselves, but we could have clicked the Browse... button and pressed [XBMC Installer].

Once we are in an XBMC media center we can now select the Persona music collection from the...
